Greetings!

If you’re like us, you’re probably feeling grateful during this post-Thanksgiving week for the gift of wilderness in your life—a gift that brings solace, deep wisdom, and a sense of renewal when we need it most. And like us, you may have even been gifted that first encounter with wilderness from an unexpected person or experience.

This #GivingTuesday we need your help to give diverse students from Northern Arizona University an inspiring outdoor experience and an appreciation for the many gifts of wilderness.

We’re partnering with NAU’s Native American Student Services to lead young adults into the beautiful Kendrick Mountain Wilderness where they’ll enjoy three days of nature, self-reliance, and adventure. With your help, we will focus on wilderness education and backcountry ethics, including hands-on training in trail maintenance techniques.

Increasing exposure to outdoor experiences is crucial to ensuring the next generation of Wilderness Stewards. This weekend trip is designed to inspire and encourage interest in caring for wilderness, particularly in our Native American youth.
Please join us in GivingWilderness this #GivingTuesday!

Yours in Wilderness,
